(Correspondence of the Inquirer, Wortramsure, Virginia, September, 15, 1802. The policy at present pursued by the Rebels of paroling all the prisoners they take, holds out a strong inducement to our officers to give themselves up as prisoners of war at the first opportunity. This was clearly demonstrated on the 9th instant, at Pennsylvania Cavalry at this place. If a provious arrangement was not made, it emed very singular how it could have happened in the manner it did. Our pickets, which were at least four miles distant, were driven in, or taken, at three o'clock in the morning. This was known to cer-tain of our officers; yet the camp was alchance for preparation. Then came a confused bustle, with conflicting orders. One officer, it is well known, ordered a retreat,

"Mr. Lovejoy reviewed the conduct of the war, and dwelt on the absolute necessity of waging it with all the power and vigor at our command. He believed Old Abe was thoroughly aroused to the emergency, and was mad through and through, up and down. He heartily indorsed Mr. Lincoln's letter to Horace Greeley. He time, and hostile as he was to the institution of slavery, he would save it, if saving it saved the republic. He appealed to the common sense of the soldiers on the negro question, and exposed the miserable clap-trap of those who did not hesitate to sacrifice the dearest rights, and even the lives of white men, to their prejudices against the blacks. He advocated confiscation, but denounced all indiscriminate plunder by our troops. His speech was listened to throughout with marked attention, and was enthusiastically applauded."
